Pete – FYI, I just checked re: the shipping and we are burning approximately CBI/Ex. 4 for sample shipment. Just thought I'd let you know.

Lisa: thanks very much. This is exactly what I'm looking for. No need to separate out the move charges now. Those are a minimal part of the overall task. I will want to capture shipping charges and the labor for data validation when we are done, but not super critical right now.

Hi everyone – I was finally able to take a breather and focus on getting this pulled together per Pete's request.

In my estimation, approximately $202,342 in total costs are related to sampling, consisting

CBI/Ex. 4

Please note the following:

CBI/Ex. 4

CBI/Ex. 4

3. This draft 1900-55 does not include any FedEx charges related to shipping samples to the lab(s). As I've mentioned to Ramon in the past, our corporate FedEx billing lags by 2-3 months because of FedEx's invoicing practices and the reconciliation of a large corporate account to the appropriate projects.

4. The estimated sampling-related labor costs do not include any non-field labor related lab procurement, data validation, etc.

Please let me know if this is what you were looking for, or if you need me to revise and re-estimate based on a different set of assumptions or parameters.

Thanks,

Lisa

Sorry I didn't get a chance to call you back Lisa. Usual crazy day. Almost free now.

Regarding the amount we've spent on sampling, include labor, analytical, ODCs, anything associated with the collection of surface water/sediment samples and analysis. Thanks

Pete – I know you're pretty busy, and I had pulled together an initial report of just lab analytical costs, but then I reread your email when I was about to send it to you, and realized perhaps I wasn't going to send what you really wanted.

Are you looking just for labor costs related to sampling, or are you looking for labor and lab analytical costs as a total? Thanks for clarifying, and I can pull a RCMS report once I hear from you.

Thanks,

Lisa

Thanks Lisa. I hate to ask, but can you tell me how much of these costs are directly attributed to just sampling?

The CPW amendment request (Amd B) is currently in the process of being finalized. I will be sending this info, in addition to the draft 1900-55 as of 8-17-15, to Ramon and Pete as I have been asked to keep them updated regularly.

Please let me know tomorrow if there is anything else you need or if you have any questions.
